issued a bill of health to 1 vessel without inspection. The vessel not inspected was the Spanish steamship Berenguer el Grande, from Spain via Havana, proceeding to New Orleans via Vera Cruz. The vessel was anchored about 5 miles offshore, and the only means that I had of boarding her was by a small sailboat, and as a gale of wind was blowing and a high sea running, I declined to make the trip, and issued a bill of health setting forth the facts on the face of it.

The mail steamers have a steam tug for tender, which is tolerably safe for boarding purposes, but the other steamers rely upon small sail-boats for attention, and they are unreliable and dangerous.

The larger part of the vessels leaving here come to the docks for cargo, where they are easily boarded.

Respectfully,

S. H. HODGSON,
Acting Assistant Surgeon, U. S. M. H. S.

The SURGEON-GENERAL,
U. S. Marine-Hospital Service.

PORTO RICO.

Report from Ponce.

PONCE, P. R., April 22, 1901.

SIR: Through the chief quarantine officer for Porto Rico, I have the honor to transmit herewith the quarantine and abstract of bills of health reports for the week ended April 20, 1901. Six vessels were inspected, 3 of which were held in quarantine to detain nonimmunes, viz, provisional flag steamship Julia, from Havana; Spanish steamship Isla de Panay, from Havana; German steamship Polaria, from Colombian ports and St. Thomas. All transacted their business under supervision and left the same day. Five bills of health were issued.

During the week, 9 new cases of smallpox, and 9 recoveries were reported, leaving 18 still under treatment. I think the continuation of the disease is due to a few cases not removed to the smallpox hospital, but very lately quarantined in the city. Yellow flags are placed on these houses but no guards. I have seen the quarantined people in close conversation with others at the doors, and with doors and windows wide open. There may be also some concealed cases.

Respectfully,

W. W. KING,

Assistant Surgeon, U. S. M. H. S.

The SURGEON-GENERAL, U. S. Marine-Hospital Service.
